INTRODUCTION

In today's globalized society, diversity and inclusion have become pivotal in shaping the reputation and success of academic institutions. By embracing diverse perspectives, universities enhance the educational experience while also making significant strides toward building a more inclusive society. Research from the U.S. Department of Education underlines the significance of diversity for fostering inclusive learning environments that reflect the rich diversity of our nation. These principles are particularly crucial in higher education settings where embracing different ideas can drive innovation and strengthen collaboration and personal growth.

As Hofstra University emphasizes its core value of building affirming and resilient relationships to advance diversity (Hofstra.edu), Zarb's social media and outreach efforts can do more to align with this mission. The Frank G. Zarb School of Business at Hofstra University, recognized as a top 100 business school in the U.S. in 2020 (Bloomberg 2020), has the potential to further enhance its standing by embracing and showcasing the principles of diversity and inclusion in more impactful ways.

By highlighting the diverse experiences of students, increasing opportunities for underrepresented groups, and inclusively framing messages, Zarb can attract a broader student demographic and strengthen its reputation. These initiatives also allow Zarb to demonstrate its dedication to building affirming and respectful relationships rooted in mutual kindness, reflecting the core values of diversity, equity, and justice upheld by Hofstra.

At Sociallyin, we understand that meaningful change begins with a genuine connection. Our expertise in storytelling and authentic engagement empowers institutions like the Frank G. Zarb School of Business. By rebranding Zarb's social media through its partnership with Sociallyin, the school will be able to put forward its commitment to diversity and inclusion. We will create compelling content that resonates with prospective students and position Zarb as a genuinely inclusive and welcoming community. We ensure that Zarb's values are not just communicated but genuinely celebrated by leveraging our expertise in influencer partnerships and creating innovative, inclusive campaigns.

BACKGROUND

In 2020, Hofstra University's Zarb School of Business was ranked #89 out of 131 business schools in the United States based on compensation, learning, networking, and entrepreneurship (Bloomberg 2020). This places Zarb in the 32.44th percentile, meaning that it performed better than only 32.44% of all business schools. We at Sociallyin believe that Zarb's rankings could be boosted by having a more diverse demographic and inclusive representation. While Hofstra University as a whole aims to "educate, advocate, engage, and empower the Hofstra community by cultivating partnerships and resources to create and sustain a diverse culture of belonging" (Hofstra.edu 2024), the Zarb School needs to better reflect this mission by actively integrating diversity and inclusion into its branding, outreach, and community engagement.

Having a wide demographic can boost a school's reputation, academics, sense of community, and more. College enrollment professionals have agreed that different perspectives from various cultures can allow students to learn from one another and help change minds or shape ideas (Moody 2020). According to the Princeton Review, the Zarb School has 22% of underrepresented minorities (The Princeton Review 2024). Zarb must now start representing minority students by achieving a wider demographic by rebranding its social media pages to promote diversity and inclusivity. Zarb's social media pages, such as Instagram, X, and Facebook, currently post announcements of upcoming events, networking opportunities, panel discussions, information sessions, and more. While most of these announcements benefit all business students, they often lack content that reflects the diversity of the student body or addresses the specific needs and interests of underrepresented groups.

The lack of diversity on Zarb's social media pages must be addressed immediately if Zarb wants to boost the business school's rankings and better its reputation. With our skills in content production, community management, influencer marketing, data analysis, and paid social advertising, our group at Sociallyin can help Zarb meet Hofstra's goal of sustaining a diverse culture of belonging.

PROPOSAL PLAN

What will we do?

We aim to provide you with an increase in minority student enrollment in the Frank G. Zarb School of Business. In order to accomplish this, we will perform a complete overhaul of the social media accounts that are currently being operated by your school. The underlying strategy that we will pursue will be to showcase the numerous opportunities for those students that are already in place, which potential students may not be aware of.

We will employ a wide variety of strategies, including:

- Content production on your behalf
- Influencer marketing campaigns
- Community management and interaction
- Data analytics and performance metrics

Our researchers have found that your organization's social media platforms primarily consist of events that have occurred, awards that have been presented to specific members of the community, and subtle postings about events that are occurring in the near future. We have noted a lack of central messaging and objectives within the posts. Our creative team will be able to work with your teams to determine those specific objectives, with the stated primary purpose of our first campaign to increase the number of enrollments of individuals from minority groups in your program.

Our content production may include interviewing students who are willing to share their experiences in the context of the school's campus and programming. We would also consider fielding influencers of specific minority groups to reach out to the appropriate target markets in our campaigns. A large portion of the service we will provide is dedicated to interacting with your base and community, which can take place in the comments under posts or on stories on Meta platforms or Snapchat. As these campaign elements, we will collect data and perform analysis on the performance of the posts we make, so we can optimally increase enrollment.

The only resources we will need from your organization and relevant teams to perform our campaigns are the cooperation of your current marketing team, permission and access to conduct staff and student interviews, and access to your social media accounts. We will also request a preliminary series of meetings with your team to better understand the mission, goals, and values of the program that you operate.

BENEFITS

Why does it matter?

Diversity is an important facet of university education as it provides students with a greater understanding of the world around them and the stories of other people and groups, and helps them to develop a sense of understanding and inclusion that they may not otherwise be exposed to (Moody). Every student in any program can benefit from understanding the people around them through increased diversity, and we aim to provide your school with that opportunity for all of your current and future students.

By creating the proper content to be utilized on your social media spaces, we will be able to not only generate more revenue through enrollment in your programs but also add value to the services that you provide to all students.

Using influencer marketing strategies can be costly, but we believe that it is an effective tool that can be used to truly connect with new audiences that were previously unimaginable. This form of advertising allows us to use the trust that is invested in the influencer to tap into a market that may have previously been unaware or distrustful of your brand (William & Mary). It may be difficult to implement the typical form of influencer marketing, which involves posting an advertisement to their own personal platform, but we believe that it would be beneficial to rework that format into television-style advertisements that can be posted on your organization's social media spaces.

Finally, we will provide you with a detailed report of performance analytics after each advertisement we have produced is live. You will be able to review the benefits that we are providing you with as they happen, as transparency among our clients is one of our highest priorities.

METHODOLOGY

How will we do it?

It will not be necessary to implement any further programs aimed towards students belonging to minority groups for the purposes of this campaign, though you may find that to be beneficial in the future. We have taken notice of the fact that your organization already has some programs in place, such as the following:

- American Marketing Association Diversity Scholarship
- Black/Hispanic Alumni Annual Scholarship
- Golden Key Undergraduate Scholarship

We are simply aiming to advertise these opportunities for those groups to spread awareness that they exist. This alone will theoretically increase enrollment among minority groups, as they will see the awareness that your organization has towards them and their struggles. We will create imaginative advertisements of relevant events taking place and post photos from the events after their completion to create an undeniable image of the Zarb School of Business in the minds of potential students.

We will also seek to field one influencer to appeal to the target audience of this campaign who would be willing to commit to a short-term contract in content creation for your organization. After each piece of content is created and posted to the proper platform, our team will respond to comments from viewers and boost the school's interaction with them as a whole. The final phase will involve our data analytics team, which will begin to create detailed reports approximately 48 hours after the post is made, which will be promptly delivered to your team. This will serve as a tangible form of the effectiveness of our operations and will hold our team accountable to you.

We will require resources to conduct our preliminary research before we can begin any campaign. We would interview faculty and staff, as mentioned previously, to understand how prevalent your existing programs for minority students are in benefiting those students already enrolled.

SCHEDULE

When will it be done?

This project will be conducted immediately after obtaining approval from Dr. Janet A. Lenaghan, Dean of the Zarb School of Business. We must also gain approval from important stakeholders at Hofstra, such as the Marketing and Communications Department for overseeing promotional efforts, the Diversity and Inclusion Officer for diversity initiatives, and the IT/Administrative Department for access to social media accounts and data. Our goal is to launch this project 2 weeks before January 27th, 2025, which is when classes for the spring semester begin. This will ensure a smooth welcome of new and returning students to Zarb's rebranded social media pages.

How long will it take?

BUDGET

How much will it cost and why?

- Consultation will help us understand the current strategies, programs, and target audience of Zarb in-depth. The budget covers the cost of consulting with students, staff, and faculty to ensure the project addresses their needs.
- Content production and graphic design will allow us to produce high-quality, authentic content that builds trust and engagement with the audience. We need to hire professional photographers and videographers to shoot and edit videos and photos.
- Partnering with influencers from minority communities helps the campaign resonate with potential students. The budget covers influencer fees for content creation, promotion, and collaboration throughout the campaign.
- Paid social media advertisements and boosting will allow us to reach a larger audience and target students from minority groups. The budget includes promoting scholarship opportunities and events.
- Using tools and platforms to monitor social media performance and track engagement (Hootsuite, Sprout Social) will allow us to schedule posts, analyze audience insights, and track overall data.

	Price
Consultation Fees (Research, Strategy Development)	$3,000
Content Development (Student Interviews, Photography, Videography)	$4,500
Graphic Design (Visual Posters and Graphics)	$2,500
Influencer Partnership Fees	$5,000
Paid Social Media Ads (Instagram, X, Facebook)	$3,000
Social Media Monitoring & Analytics Tools	$1,000
Meeting Expenses (Travel & Virtual Meetings)	$1,000
Totals:	$20,000

Is it worth the cost?

The total price is absolutely worth the cost, as all of these components will fill the needs of Zarb's social media pages. With better social media pages and promoting more diversity, there will be a great increase in the admission of students with minority backgrounds, helping the Zarb school rank higher among business schools in the US, and creating a diverse community at Hofstra.
